HISTORY OF THE BARTHOLOMEW FAMILY

GEN. JOSEPH BARTHOLOMEW

The origin of the Bartholomew family is in England, where at Burford, the old Bartholomew Chapel has stood for 500 years or more. William Bartholomew came to the United States about the year 1690, and settled at Stony Creek, Connecticut, where he built a mill, and has many descendents living there.

Authority, Record of Bartholomew family history of 1885.

General Joseph Bartholomew, son of Daniel Bartholomew, was born in New Jersey March 15, 1766. When two years old his father moved to Laurel Hill, Pennsylvania, and died there. When Joseph was old enough to carry a rifle he enlisted in the Revolutionary army and assisted in driving back Indians and breaking up Tory Camps. After the close of the Revolutionary War, he joined General Wayne's forces in his campaign against the Northwest Indians. About the year 1790 he married Miss Christiana Pickenpaugh, by whom ten children were born.

John, of Indiana, married Nancy McNaught; Sarah married Hugh Espy; Martha married Gamaliel Vail; Christiana married Isaac Epler; Amelia married Robert Hopkins; Catherine married Thomas McNaught; Marston Clark Bartholomew married Mary Hopkins.

Joseph died young; Mary married Patrick Hopkins, and Elizabeth married (as his second wife) Isaac Epler.

In the year 1790, General Joseph Bartholomew, with a small colony, floated down the Ohio River and settled at the head of the falls of that river on the Kentucky side, on land on which the city of Louisville now stands. While there he acted as Government scout and spy, watching movements of Indians and passed through many adventures with them, of whom quite a number paid the penalty of their lives by their daring.

He lived in Kentucky until the Territory in southern Indiana, known as "Clarks Grant" was ceded by the Indians to the United States. After the cession, the General moved across the river and settled near where the present city of Charleston now stands. This city for many years was county seat of Clark County Indiana. Here his wife died in 1809.

Soon after settlement the Indians, guided by Chief Tecumseh were troublesome and made depredations on the settlers. Gen. William Harrison was Governor of the territory at this time, and established a fort on upper Wabash river near the Indian town of Tippecanoe. Here Harrison was in command, Bartholomew was Colonel, having charge of the Infantry. By his bravery in this battle Bartholomew was brevetted Brigadier Gen. of Volunteers. He was wounded in this battle and was granted a pension by the Government.

Afterwards, Gen. Bartholomew fought in the war with the Indians at Vincennes, Indiana, and also at Ft. Harrison on the Wabash River. He was then promoted by the President to be Major General.

In June 1811, Gen. Bartholomew was married to Miss Elizabeth McNaught, by whom five children were born. Namely:

George McNaught, born Mar. 12, 1812. Died at Lodi, Wisconsin in 1885, and was buried in the Lodi Cemetery. Married Miss S. C. Hefner.

Angelia married William Merriman. She was born Jan. 27, 1816, and died in the State of Washington 1900, and buried in the Lodi Cemetery.

Nancy married James Bradley, Pontiac, Illinois. (Date of birth and death not known.)

James Curry was born 1819. He died 1895 at Lodi. He married Mary McNaught in 1841, the daughter of Thomas and Catherine (Bartholomew) McNaught. Buried in a Lodi Cemetery.

William Milton, born 1821, married Francis Goddard, and died at Pingree, North Dakota.

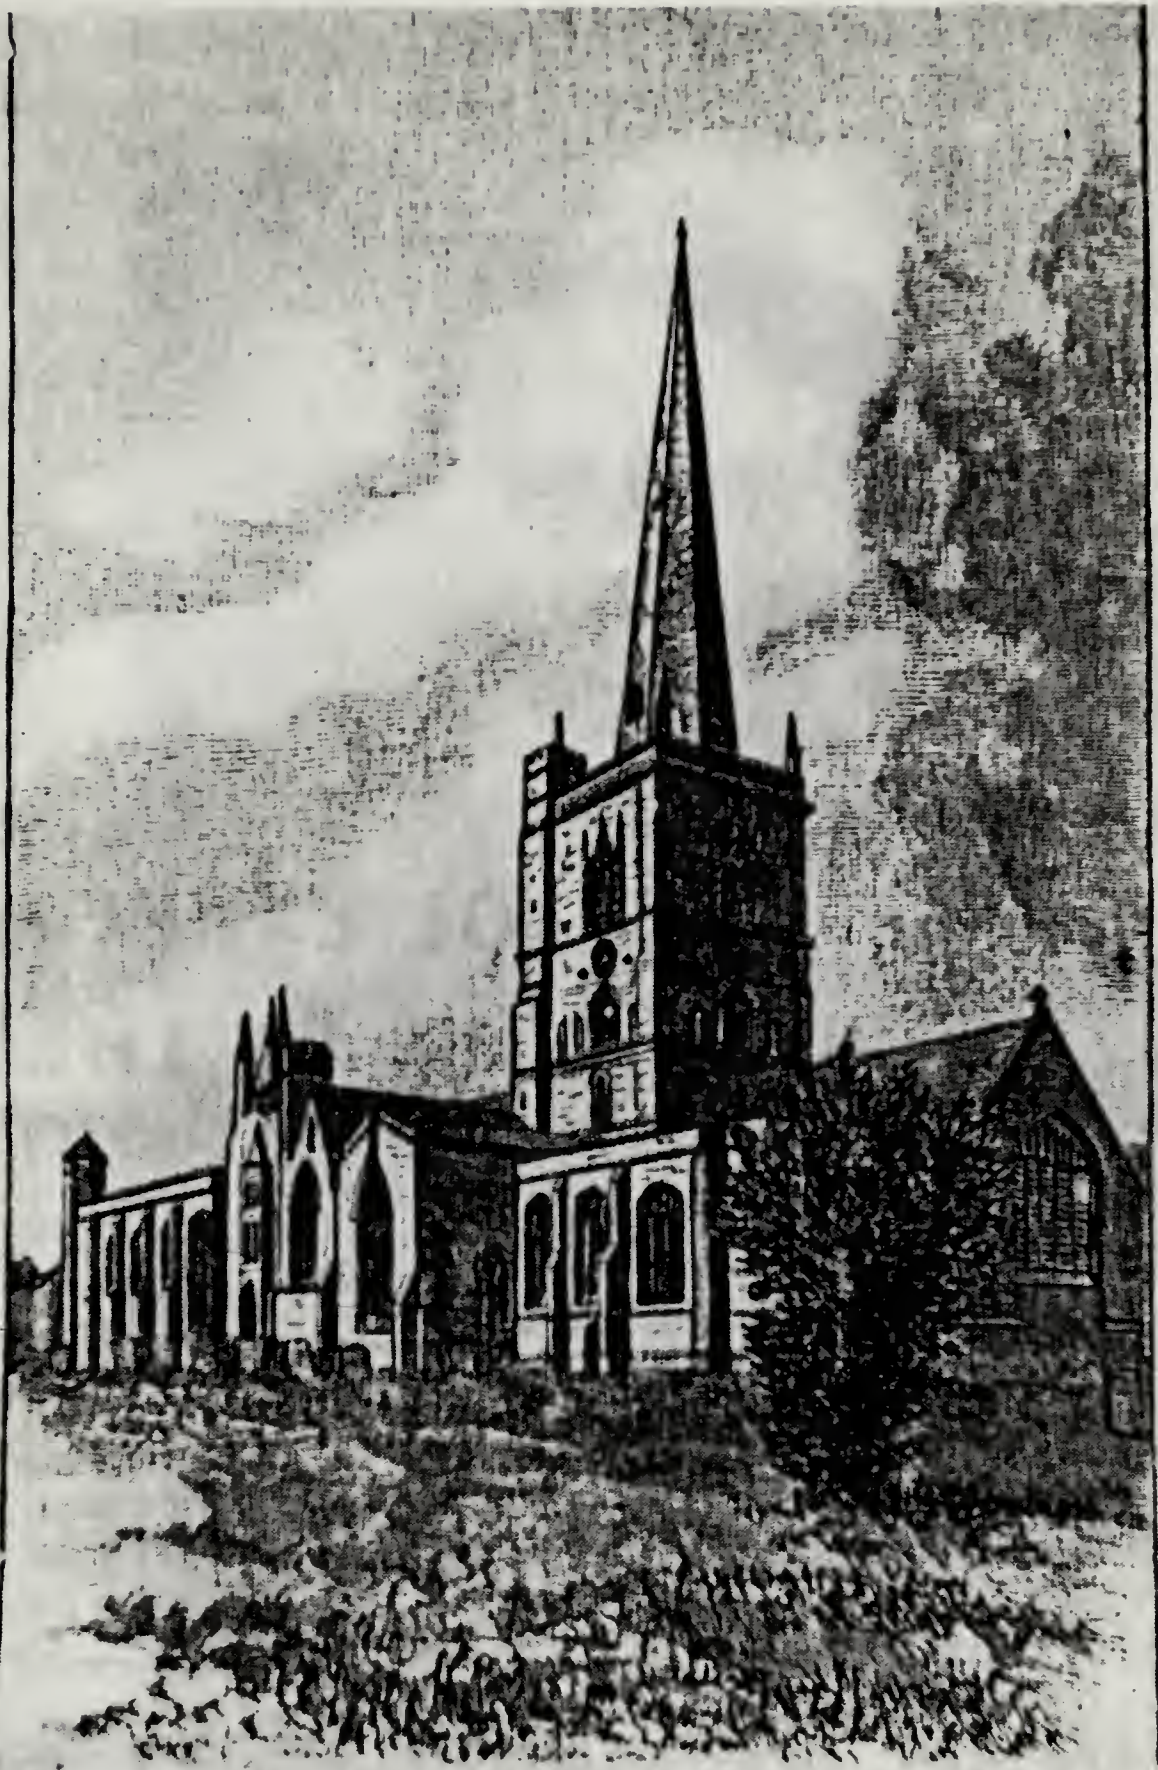

The county of "Bartholomew", Indiana was named in honor of the General and his picture hangs in the Court House at Columbus, the County Seat.

About the year 1830, the General moved with his family to McLean County, Illinois, and settled on Section 13, Township of Money Creek. While here he was engaged in the Black Hawk War. He died at his Money Creek residence Nov. 2, 1840, and was buried in Clarksville Cemetery.

Authority, War Record McLean County, Illinois.

BARTHOLOMEW CHAPEL, BURFORD, ENGLAND

Marston Clark Bartholomew, son of Gen. Joseph was born in Jeffersonville, Indiana, in 1806. He was married to Mary Hopkins in 1828 in Clark County, Indiana. She was the daughter of Robert Hopkins and Nancy Spence, and was born at Dover, Delaware, Feb. 20, 1805. Her Great Grandfather Robert Hopkins came into the State of Delaware from England by way of Canada, and acquired a large tract of land under the original Penn Purchase, and deeded a portion to his son John Hopkins.

Robert Hopkins, son of John, and father of Mary Hopkins Bartholomew, moved from Delaware to Shelbyville, Kentucky about the year 1816, with his family, and later moved to Charleston, Indiana and also lived at Jeffersonville, Ind., Clark County. Here he died in 1830, at an advanced age and was buried there. He took an active part in politics and community affairs in Clark County and was a substantial citizen.

Authority, by Robert Newton Bartholomew in his write up of his father and mother's family in Columbia County History of 1901—Wisc.

Marston Clark Bartholomew moved from Indiana, with his father, the General, and his own family to McLean County, Illinois in 1830 and entered land in Sec. 3, Township 25 North. The family of Marston Clark and Mary his wife were:

Christiana, born at Charleston, Ind. 1830: Nancy, born at Lexington, McLean Co., Illinois, 1832: Robert Newton born at Lexington, McLean Co., Illinois, 1834: Joseph Merriman, born at Lexington, McLean Co., Illinois 1837: Mary Catherine, born at Lexington, McLean Co., Illinois 1840: and John Marston, born at Lexington, McLean Co., Illinois 1843.

After living in the State of Illinois for 15 years, Marston Clark became dissatisfied with the sameness of land and plains and was looking for a new location. His brother George had previously made a trip through southern Wisconsin as far as Columbus, Wisconsin, and his description of fertile land with all the springs of water and the wooded hills so pleased Marston Clark that he decided to move into Wisconsin.

On March 1, 1845, he staked his claim on Sec. 22. He burned off the grass, drove his wagon onto the clearing, slept there that night. He found that the land had already been deeded, so paid two and one half dollars an acre at the land office in Mineral Point to perfect the claim and title.

His route from Illinois to this new claim was by way of Columbus, Wisconsin. He first lived with a Brothertown Indian, who afterwards helped him build his log cabin.

The Indians were firing the woods to scare out the deer so they could shoot them. The Indians in this locality were mostly Winnebagoes and Brothertown, and were friendly. Marston's brother, George came back in April, this same year and made claim to land in Sec. 26. These claims afterwards became part of the Town of Lodi. The brothers soon had land cleared, and planted potatoes, buck wheat, corn and other small grain.

Then in Sept., 1845, the brothers went back to Illinois and brought their families. They were a very religious family of the Methodist faith, and in the fall of this same year they organized the Methodist Church, with the help of Rev. Henry Maynard, who with his family had moved here in May, the same year, and lived in a tent at the foot of Webster Bluff.

The first meetings were held in the Bartholomew cabins. Thus these three families were only ones to locate in this locality in the year 1845.

When Marston Clark first came to this new land, he found the nearest white settlements were at Madison, Ft. Winnebago, Wyocena, Columbus, and Sauk-Prairie, and made his first trip for mail to Columbus. He afterwards found there was a Post Office at Clarks Corners, Springfield Township, Dane County.

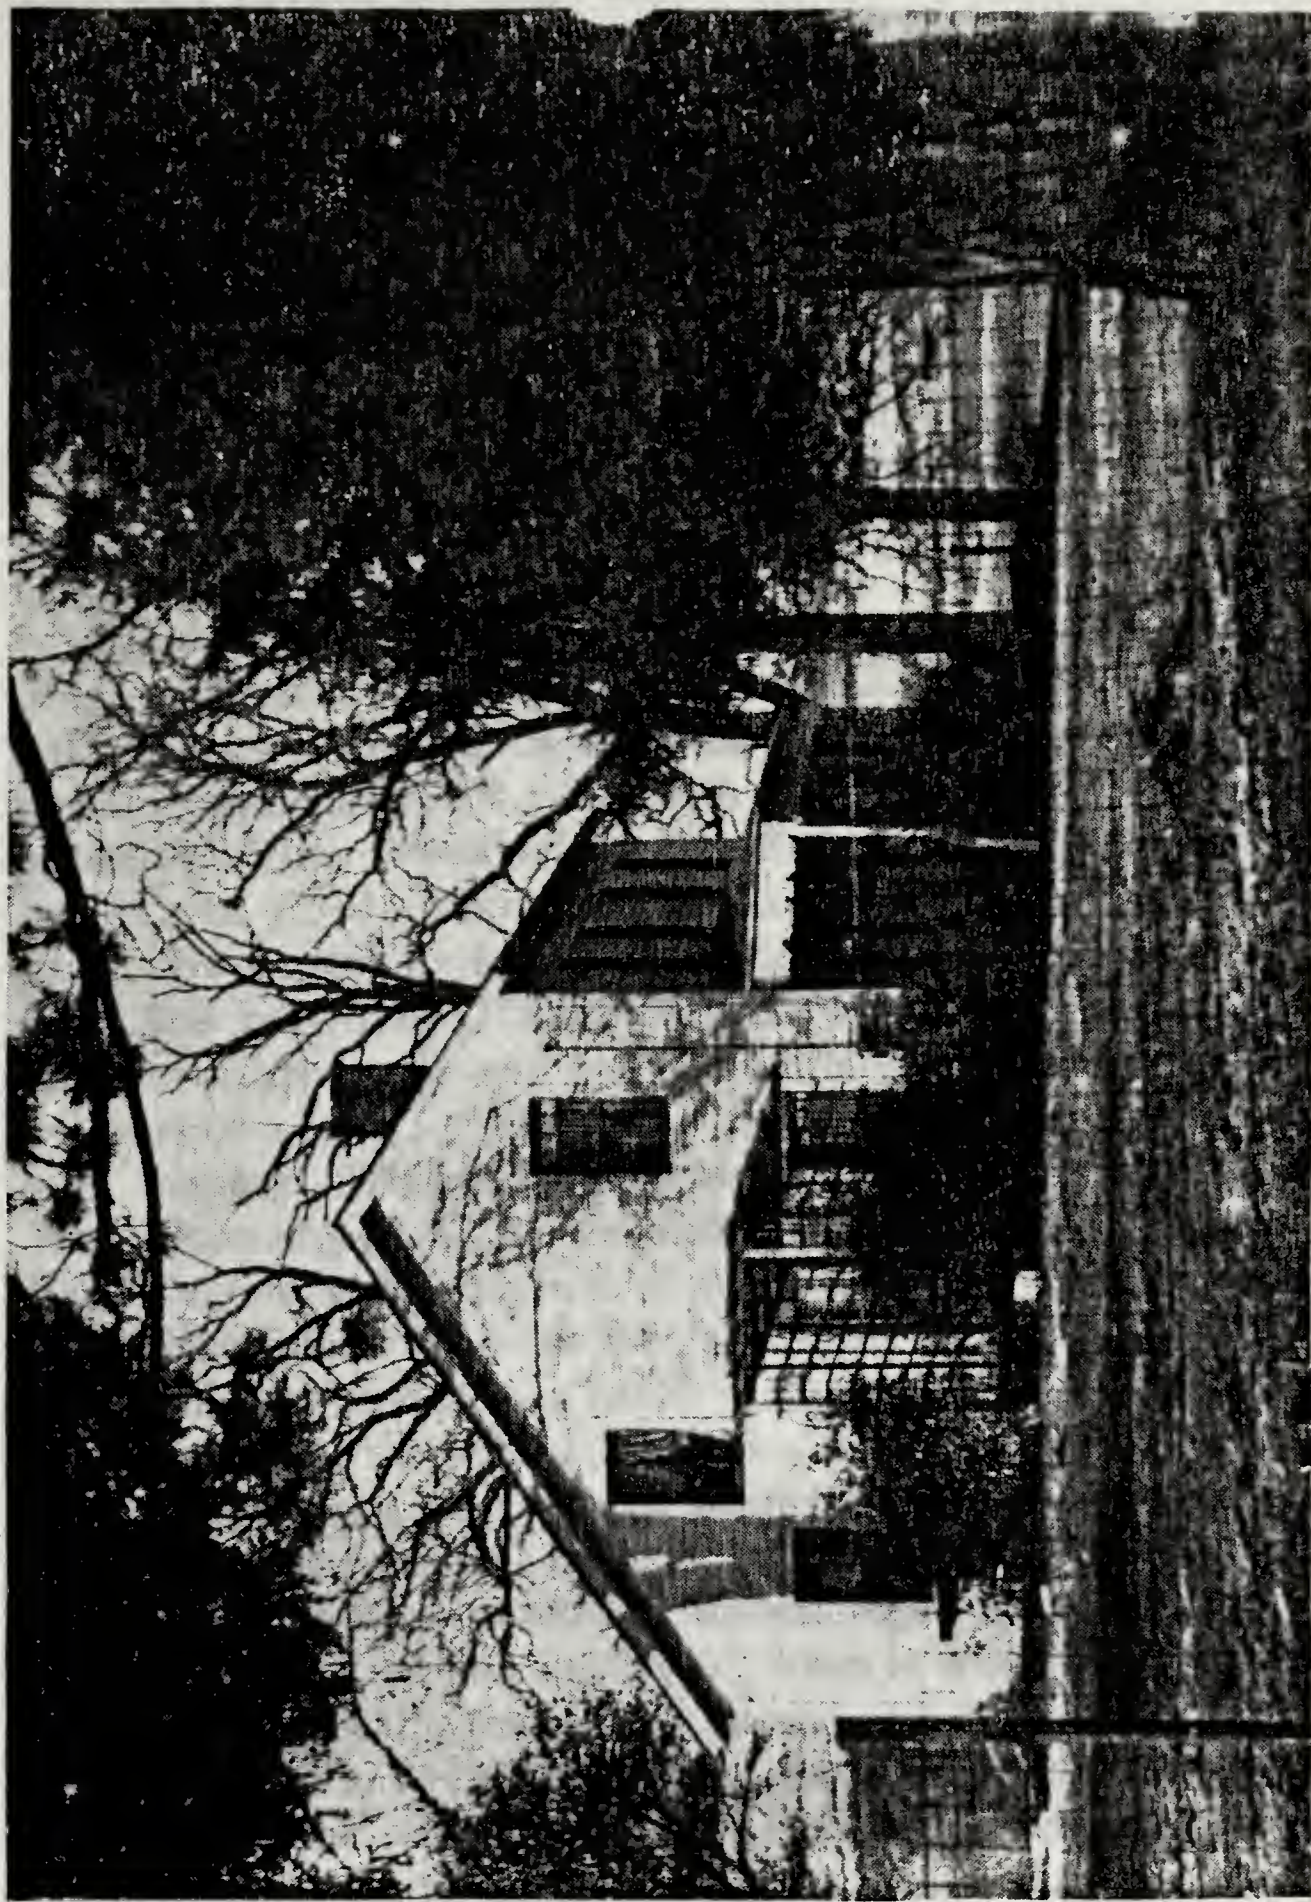

The son, Robert Newton Bartholomew, age eleven years at this time, made this trip several times on a pony following an Indian path through the woods for 12 miles to the Post Office.

Marston Clark Bartholomew served as first Chairman of the Board of Supervisors of the Town of Lodi, and held many other offices afterwards. He was a Whig politically, later becoming a Republican. He was a hunter and trapper, and crack shot with a rifle. He kept a dry goods store when in Illinois, and later in Lodi. He did some of the surveying for the Town of Lodi. The knowledge of this being passed down from his father, the General. The brother George also did a part of the survey for Lodi.

When the Civil War broke out Marston and his three sons went to Camp Randall, Madison, June 1861 to enlist. The father and two sons, Joseph and John were inducted and became members of Company A - 7th Wisconsin Vol. Infantry. But the son Robert did not measure up to requirements, for the recruiting officer in charge was very particular in regard to height. Robert returned home and worked the large farm of his father's in connection with his own farm, and cared for his wife, two children, his mother, and also his brother's wife and one son.

M. C. BARTHOLOMEW RESIDENCE - LODI - WHERE HE DIED JAN. 1881

The son John was killed in action, during the Battle of Gainesville, Aug., 1862. This battle was the beginning of the seven days' fight.

Marston Clark, the father, was wounded in the Battle of Antietam, 1863, and was then sent home for disability.

He was fifty-five years old at the time of his enlistment and was told that no man who was fifty years old or more would be accepted. So Marston told the officer he was under fifty, (he had the number 50 in his cap).

Marston Clark was a very benevolent person, giving to each of his children a deed to part of his claim. The claim where the old homestead was located has been in possession of the Bartholomew families for 102 years with the exceptions of the years in the 70's when it was sold to Mr. Seth Andrews and resold in the 80's to T. M. Warren of Baraboo, Wisconsin. During this time of owner-ship by Mr. Warren and his son Wm. Warren, this farm was rented by Robert Newton Bartholomew who lived there with his family and worked the large farm in connection with his own farm for 14 years.

In January 1891, the old homestead farm was purchased from Wm. Warren by M. C. Bartholomew, the second (a son of Robert Bartholomew and Grandson of Marston Clark Bartholomew). Clark Bartholomew owned the farm until his death Jan. 1935. The farm then passed into hands of Rollin Bartholomew, son of Marston Clark, the second, and now owned by him and farmed by his son George, who with his family live there.

A part of the original claim of Marston Clark Bartholomew, the first, was deeded to his son, Robert Newton Bartholomew in 1858 and owned by him until 1908, when it was sold to the son, Albert Grant Bartholomew who farmed and ran a dairy in connection with it until 1938, when it was sold to other parties. Thus this part of the original claim of 1845, was in hands of Bartholomew family for 93 consecutive years.

Marston Clark built a house on his original claim in about 1870, and lived there the remaining years of his life. He died Jan. 8, 1881 at his home in Lodi, Wisconsin, and was buried under auspices of the Lodi Valley Masonic Lodge No. 99, F. & A. M. being a member of this order many years. His interment was Mt. Pleasant Cemetery, Lodi, Wisconsin.

Authority, writings of the son Robert Newton Bartholomew in several Columbia Co. Histories and author of this biography by Mrs. Nellie Fellows—a Granddaughter of Marston Clark Bartholomew.

The children of Marston Clark and his wife Mary Hopkins Bartholomew and their descendents.
